Facilitated Growth - Experiential Activities for Recovery and Wellness

January 17, 2020

Marc V. Pimsler, LAPC, NCC, MAC, CC

Experiential activities are designed to create experiences that facilitate group cohesion, team building, leadership skills, problem solving, and emotional regulation. The latest research on trauma, addiction, and the pursuit of wellness is pointing towards brain-based activities, and this training focuses on learning by doing and healing through action. Experiential activities can be highly effective when treating clients with trauma, addiction, sexual and intimacy issues, eating disorders, codependency and low self-worth. This training will allow you to experience the power of experiential work, help you understand why and how experiential modalities work, and prepare you to facilitate experiential activities with tips, tools and techniques.

Since 2004, Marc Pimsler has worked in a variety of counseling and consulting capacities in and around the metro Atlanta area. Marc is the Chief Creative Officer for MVP Consulting and is a sought after trainer with ACTS Consulting. Marc maintains a private practice where he serves individuals and families in need of substance abuse counseling specializing in addressing Shame and Trauma. He is certified as a national master addictions counselor, certified clinical supervisor, certified yoga and meditation teacher, and is also a certified practitioner with the Institute for Rapid Resolution Therapy. Marc is passionate about recovery, both his own as well as his clients', believing that sometimes all we need is a helping hand and a fresh perspective. Grounded in the belief system that everyone has the capacity to recover, Marc brings humor and spirituality to everything he is involved in.

Clinical Spirituality

Jeff Georgi, M.Div, MAH, LPC, LCAS, CCS, CGP

May 15, 2019

For years, in the treatment of substance use disorders, spirituality has been seen as an important aspect to be addressed. Coming out of the Twelve Step community, spirituality and its importance had been recognized, but without clear definition. This workshop will give a clinical definition to spirituality and its clinical presentation. Utilizing the Spiritual Platform™ as a foundation, participants will learn how to assess individual's competencies and deficits in the face of spirituality and work toward repair in this dimension of the bio-psycho-social-spiritual frame of reference defining the disease of addiction.

From a clinical perspective, spirituality will seek definition not from the content of our lives, but by the experience of life's process. This workshop will create a clear differentiation between spirituality and religion, allowing the clinician to support the patient's spiritual growth independent of religious commitment. In addition, attendees will have the opportunity to examine the role of spirituality not only in determining health, but also in the expression of addictive disease. During this workshop, clinicians will be provided with specific interventions to use within the clinical arena to strengthen individuals' sense of their own spirituality.

Jeff Georgi, M.Div, MAH, LPC, LCAS, CCS, CGP is a Consulting Associate in the Department of Psychiatry and the Division on Addiction Research and Translation at Duke University Medical Center and has a private practice, Jeff Georgi & Associates, LLC.
